WILL JOIN LEAGUE

This game was the first game between the Wild(?)cats and Buffaloes since 1923, when Cross Plains High School organized its first football team. Rising Star run over a bunch of green boys who had never played the game before by a score of 40 to 0. Rising Star, at that time, was at the height of its football glory.

The Buffaloes will be a member of the Texas Interscholastic League when the Sun rises on 1929 football season, and announce to the world that the Cross Plains High School Buffaloes of 1929 will be the 29 Class "B" Champions of Texas!

IN TRIBUTE

The Buffalo—Wild(?)Cat game was the last game in which the Seniors of '29 will participate. These boys have fought for Old Cross Plains in every game in which they have played this year and deserve all credit that is given to them. They fought from the first whistle until the final gun and encouraged their teammates to do the same. We cannot praise them too highly. They regret that they must give way to the up and coming substitutes of to-day who will form the Championship teams of tomorrow. They have fought the good fight and with them we are well pleased."

The retiring Buffaloes are Capt. Arthur Carmichael, Earnest Davis, Stanley Clark, Herbert Maddux, George Bennett, Seaborn Collins, Andy Coppinger, T. Murry and Darwin Ivy.

(Special to the 28' Buffaloes)

The writer and the citizens of Cross Plains, extend to you their sincere congratulations. You have fought hard, played square and have given the best in you. We wish you success next year.

By Robert E. Howard

The Wanderer.

They had halted in a thick clump of trees at the foot of the Ramparts and the mouth of the steep defile was visible in front of them.

"That's a bad place," muttered Hard Luck. "I been at this gulch before. Gila built his traps up on the plateau. Steve, we kin come at them Navajoes, supposin' they're still up there, by two ways. We kin circle to the south, climb up the mountain-sides and come down the west slopes or we kin take a chance an' ride right up the gulch. That's a lot quicker, of course pervidin' we ain't shot or mashed by fallin' rocks afore we git to the top."

"Let's take it on the run," urged Steve, quivering with impatience. "I'll take more'n bullets and rocks to stop me now."

"Alright," said Hard Luck, reining his horse out of the trets, "Here goes! Of that wild ride up the gorge Steve never remembered very much. The memory was always like a nightmare, in which he saw dark walls flash past, heard the endless clatter of hoofs and the rattle of dislodged stones. Nothing seemed real except the pistol he clutched in his right hand and the laboring steed who plunged reeled beneath him, driven headlong up the slope, with spurs that raked the panting sides.

Then they burst into the open and saw plateau spread wide and silent before them, with smoldering masses of coal where the cabins and corrals should have stood. They rode up slowly. The tracks of horses led away up into the hills to the west and there was no sign of life. Dreading what he might see, Steve looked. Down close to where the corral had been lay the body of Gila Murken. Lying partly in the coals that marked the remnants of the larger cabin, was the corpse of a large dark faced man, who had once worn a heavy beard, though now beard and hair were mostly scorched off. There was no sign of the girl.

"Do you—do you think she burned in the cabin, Hard Luck?"

"Naw, I know she didn't for the reason that if she had, they'd be some charred bones. They done rode off with her."

Steve felt a curious, all-gone feeling, as if the realization that Joan was alive, was too great a joy for the human brain to stand. Even though he knew that she must be in a fearful plight, at least she was living.

"Look at the stiffs," said Hard Luck admiringly. "There's what Allison made his last stand—at the cabin door, protectin' the gal, I reckon. This Allison seemed to be a mighty hard hombre but I reckon he had a streak of the man in him. Stranger in these parts to all but Murken."

Four Navajoes lay face down in front of the white man's body. They were clad only in dirty trousers and blankets flung about their shoulders. They were stone dead.

"Trail of blood from whar the corral was," said Hard Luck, "They caught him in the open and shot him up afore he could get to the cabin, I figure. Down there at the corral Murken died. The way I read it, Allison made a break and got to the cabin whar the gal was. Then they surged in on him and he killed these four devils and went over the ridge hisself."

Steve bent over the grim spectacle and then straightened.

"Thought I knowed him, Allison—Texas man he was. A real hard hombre, down on the border. Got run outa El Paso for gun-runnin' into Mexico."

"Texas breed," said Steve grimly. "I reckon all the good battlers aint in Texas," said Hard Luck tersely, "Not denyin', he put a man-sized fight. Now, then look. Trails of fourteen horses goin' west—five carryin' weight, the rest bare—tell by the way the hoofs sink in, of course. All the horses missin' out of the corral four dead Indians here. That means they wan't but a small party of 'em. Figurin' one of the horses is bein' rid by the gal, I guess we got only four req skins to deal with. Small war party scoutin' in front of the tribe, I imagine, if the whole tribe's on the war path. Now they're lightenin' back into the hills with the gals, the brons they took from the corral, and the horses of their dead tribesmen—which stopped Allison's bullets. Best thing for us to do is follow and try to catch up with 'em afore they git back to the rest of their gang."

"Then lets go," exclaimed Steve, trembling with impatience, "I'm nearly crazy standin' here doin' nothin'." Hard Luck glanced at the steeds, saw that they had recovered from the terrific strain of the flying climb, and and nodded. As they rode past the embers of the smaller cabin, he drew rein for an instant.

"Steve, what's them things?" Steve looked somberly at the charred and burnt machines which lay among the smoking ruins.

"Stamps and presses and steel dies," said he, "Counterfiet machines. And look at the greenbacks."

Fragments of green paper litte red the earth as if it v had been torn and flung about in anger or mockery.

"Murken and Edwards and Allison was counterfieters, then. Huh! No wonder they didn't want anybody snoopin' around. That's why Murken wouldn't let the gal go—afraid she knew too much."

They started on again at a brisk trot and Hard Luck ruminated.

"Mighta known it when they come up here a year ago. Reckon Edwards went to Rifle Pass every week, or some other nearby place and put the false bills in circulation. Musta had an agent. And they give money to the Indians who found they'd been given money (hich was no good, and bein' all fired up with Murken's bad whiskey they just bust loose."

"If so be we find Joan," said Steve somberly, "Say nothin' about her uncle bein' a crook."

"Sure."

Their steeds were mounting the west ern slopes, up which went the trail of the marauders. They crossed the ridge, went down the western incline and struck a short expanse of comparatively level country.

"Listen at the drums!" muttered Hard Luck, "Gettin' nearer. The whole tribe musg be on the march."

The drums were talking loud and clear from somewhere in the vastness in front of them and Steve seemed to catch in their rumble an evil note of sinister triumph.

Then the two riders were electrified by a burst of wild and ferocious yells from the heavily timbered levels to the west, in the west, in the direction they were going. Flying hoofs beat out a thundering tattoo and a horse raced into sight running hard and low, with a slim white figure lying close along his neck. Behin' came four hideous demons, spurring and yelling.

"Joan!" the word burst from Steve's lips in a great shout and he spurred forward. Simultaneously he heard the crash of Hard Luck's buffalo gun and saw the foremost red topple earthward, his steed sweeping past with an empty saddle. The girl whirled up beside him, her arms reaching for him.

"Steve!" her cry was like the wail of a lost child.

"Ride for the plateau and make it down through the gulch!" he shouted, wheeling aside to let her pass, "Go!"

Then he swung back to meet the oncoming attackers. The surprize had been as much theirs as the white men's. They had not expected to be followed so soon, and when they had burst through the trees, the sight of the two white men had momentarily stunned them with the unexpectedness of it. However, the remaining three came on with desperate courage and the white men close in to meet them.

Hard Luck's single shot rifle was empty, but he held it in his left hand, guiding his steed with his knees, while he drew a long knife with his free hand. Steve spurred in, silent and grim, holding his fire until the first of the attackers was almost breast to breast with him. Then, as the rifle stock in the red hands went up, Steve shot him twice through his painted face and saw the fierce eyes go blank before the body slumped from the saddle. At the same instant Hard Luck's horse crashed against the bronc of another Indian and the lighter mustang reeled to the shock. The red skin's thrusting blade glanced from the empty rifle barre and the knife in Hard Luck's right hand whipped in, just under the heart.

T. C. C. TELEGRAPHY GRADUATES IN DEMAND

"It is a great source of satisfaction," says G. L. Luce, Printer Supervisor, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, Dallas, Texas, himself a Tyler graduate, "too those who have executive responsibilities in the telephone and telegraph field too know there is such a school as Tyler Commercial College maintaining high-grade courses of instruction in telegraphy. Great organizations like our own rapidly expanding to take care of the increasing volume of telephone and telegraph traffic, and it would add greatly to our difficulties if we had to develop our assistants from raw recruits.

"Telegraphic instruction at Tyler Commercial College is given on a comprehensive scale. The courses are well planned. The department is under expert supervision. The equipment is complete. Telegraphic wires running into the department connecting all parts of the country add realism to the instruction and afford actual experience.

"I can speak with assurance of this subject, as I began my business experience as the General Telegraphy Course at Tyler; moreover, I am in a position to note the splendid progress that is made by graduates entering our organization from T. C. C. While we have been taking Tyler graduates into our organization for a number of years, I was surprised to learn, during a recent visit I made to the Bell Exchanges in Texas, that we have so large a number of former Tyler students with us.

"I would say this to young men: 'If the opportunities of the telegraph and telephone field appeal to you, you can save time in your race for advancement by getting a Tyler training first.'

Isn't what Mr. Luce said sufficient to convince you that Tyler is the foremost Commercial school for YOU?

If you would like to have a catalog about the Telegraphy Course, Radio, Business or Commercial course of any description, let us send you a copy of ACHIEVING SUCCESS IN BUSINESS. FORD TANK STANDS GREAT PRESSURE

The gasoline tank is one of the really revolutionary features of the new example of the quality of material new Model A Ford car and is a striking and workmanship in this latest product of one of the most remarkable industrial organizations the world has ever seen.

The tank is made of tene plate, which is sheet steel coated with tin to prevent rust and corrosion. The steel sheets from which the tank is made are from .040 of an inch .051 of an inch thick.

The two halves of the tank are first pressed out into shape in huge metal presses and these two halves then go to the assembly line which leads to the welding machines. The opening for the gasoline inlet is stamped out of the upper or cowl section and the filler flange for the cap is rolled into the opening. A steering column bracket is riveted on the outside at the bottom of the lower portion of the tank and these rivets are all treated with tin plate to prevent corrosion. An ignition cable support also is welded to this section and baffle plates are soldered inside to prevent the splashing of gasoline when the car is in use. Then the two tank halves go into a soda bath where they are thoroughly cleaned.

But there is still another process which is being used to test frequent samples of the finished tanks. In this test the tank is filled with seven or eight gallons of water and placed upon an agitator or "shimmy" machine which simulates driving conditions over an extremely rough road at a high rate speed. In some of these tests sample tanks have been thoroughly jounced and jolted continuously for four or five weeks without developing any leaks or manufacturing flaws.

During the experimental stage several of these tanks were blown up by air pressure until they looked like balloons, but the welded held seems perfectly against the terrific pressure.

NEW CHEVROLET A WONDERFUL CAR

Although Chevrolet originally planned only for eleven major advance showings of its new 6-cylinder car, the tremendous interest which has excited throughout the country to see the new car has made it necessary for the company to plan fifty additional advance showings in other important centers, company officials announced yesterday.

Already additional showings have been held at Philadelphia, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Flint, Columbus and Cleveland. The first four of these observed openings last Saturday. The Cleveland opening was held Monday. Columbus had its opening Tuesday.

Everywhere the new Chevrolet line has been displayed thus far the crowds have been tremendous. At New York, Detroit, Los Angeles and Washington, cities on the original list of eleven where showings have already been completed, close to a million flocked to inspect the new cars.

At Detroit the opening day crowd, November 24, was 28,000, a figure which bettered by 3,000 the best opening day crowd in the history of the famous Detroit Automobile Show. Approximately a quarter million people visited the showing during its six day New York run. Proportionate crowd interest was demonstrated at Washington, Chicago and Los Angeles.

Fifteen mammoth Chevrolet factories throughout the country are working at top speed turning out parts and assembling these parts into complete automobiles. Every thing is being pushed forward at peak capacity so that the thousands who have already placed orders will not be disappointed when deliveries begin January 1. As soon as the cars come off the assembly line they are distributed to the dealer organization so that every Chevrolet dealer will have cars on display and ready for delivery to customers December 29.

Many visitors besides the membership enjoyed the 3 o'clock song service at the Church of Christ last Sunday. Prof. Head, who is conducting the singing class, has done a good work, as the class, joined by a number of the visitors, excellently rendered some difficult songs.

A TURKEY DINNER

A turkey dinner was enjoyed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Lee Smith, Sunday, by Mr. and Mrs. Earl Montgomery, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Smith and family, and M. Woods, all of Cross Plains, and Mrs. Ed True of Dallas. Mrs. True is visiting in the home of her brother, J. Lee Smith.

Students are smart these days, but most of them flunk in their civic examinations when asked what Congressman get pay for.

R. E. Wilson was the lucky winner of the unique little car which was given away on the streets of Cross Plains last Tuesday evening. The car was given to the holder of the lucky number through a trade proposition conducted by a number of the business concerns of the town, including the Cross Plains Hardware Co., Jim Settle Tailor Shop, Smith Drug Co., The Toggery, Helpy-Sely and Liberty Theatre. The lucky number was secured from the Helpy-Sely. Killing a big buck and winning an automobile within a week has led Jeff Clark to list a number who will probably have time to sit up with a friend, as there is another chance at luck to take place here next Saturday. Weel, R. E. is the general owner and manager of the Wilson Cafe, everybody likes him, and we don't care if he wins a flying-machine, just so he stays in Cross Plains and don't try to ride the darn thing.

TRADE AT HOME

The utilities of a city are combined in your motor car

YOUR automobile is something like a miniature city. There is an electric light and power system, a water system, a fuel system.

In the new Ford, you will find each of these systems of the latest design and best materials. Every part has been made to serve you faithfully and well at a minimum of trouble and expense.

Take, for example, the generator—one of the most important parts of the electrical system which supplies the current for lighting and for engine ignition.

In the new Ford, the generator is of the power-house type and is distinctive in many features. It has been specially designed to prevent most forms of trouble. Oiling is necessary only once a year. About the only thing you need do is to have the charging rate changed as the seasons change.

Closely allied to the electrical system is the ignition system. It, too, is of new mechanical design in the new Ford. There is but one high tension cable and that connects the coil with the distributor. Even cables from the distributor to the spark plugs have been eliminated. Special care has also been taken to make the distributor water-proof, thus preventing short circuits from rain, etc.

The entire electrical and ignition systems of the new Ford are so simple in design and so carefully made that they will give you surprisingly little trouble. Yet that doesn't mean they should be neglected. Certain little attentions are needed from time to time.

The storage battery should be given water and the connections kept clean. The generator charging rate should be changed as indicated. Spark plugs should be cleaned at regular intervals. Distributor points should also be kept clean and the distributor cam given a light film of vaseline every 2000 miles.

These are just little things, but they mean a great deal to your car. You can have them looked after at very small cost by the Ford dealer when you take the car in for oiling and greasing.

A thorough checking-up at regular intervals will lengthen the life of your car and give you many thousands of miles of carefree, economical motoring.

THE ROAD TO HEALTH

To Whom this may concern:

This is to certify that I was a sufferer of appendicitis and was in a serious condition, there was two Doctors in Brownwood told me I would have to have an operation, that my appendix had all ready burst. My Father and Mother, Mr. and Mrs. John Ham of Cross Plains come to me. My Mother said I am going to take her home, and those Doctors told her if she did it would kill her, but they brought me to Cross Plains to Dr. Shoultz. I have taken six treatments and can frankly say that I am free from pain and sorrow, haven't had any soreness since the third treatment. Dr. Shoultz told me to eat anything that I wanted. When I came to him I was living on Soup and had been in bed for about ten days.

I am going home tomorrow feeling fine and I can't tell you how I appreciate what he has done for me, and I earnestly recommend Dr. Shoultz to all suffering Humanity.

HAPPY CHRISTMAS SEASON IS HERE

The merchants in Cross Plains, and many of the homes have been decorated for the happy Christmas season, and with them and all our readers the Review shares and holds a mighty brief for the occasion. Christmas is the seasoning of life: it imparts a wholesome flavor to more or less wearisome existence, and it is something wholesomely relished by all classes of people. Christmas, in fact reduce the classes into the masses. It is the great leveler toward human sympathy, human interest and devotion. It is a leveler unlike calamity or devastation in that it brings men, women and children together in a spirit of charitable action and high idealism, without any element of loss in its connection.

In its deeper meaning Christmas is not a "day," nor is the Christmas season a mere period of time. It is an experience, an ideal, a fresh breath of Divinity blow across the sands of time and recurring each year to lend buoyancy and hope to mortal thought and aspiration. One can and should enjoy the experience that Christmas makes possible all through the year. Christmas is an institution of general observance which is centered around Dec. 25, a mere dot on the calendar of time, but a bright spot in the schedule of life.

The whole month of December takes on the atmosphere of the Yuletide. For weeks after its memories linger in the hearts of the people. To do without Christmas would be to do without one of the greatest rewards of human effort, and to fail in some manner to participate in the activities of the Christmas season is to sustain a great loss in human experience. That the business of those most fortunate should be to make possible the sharing of all in the good things both materially and spiritually is the big and wonderful thing of Christmas, for that was the mission of Him whose birth we celebrate.

SUIT TO BAR HOOVER FROM OFFICE FILED

A more or less intelligent "crank" in Cleveland, Ohio, has filed suit in Federal Court to prevent Hoover from taking office as President. Gustave F. Ebding is the name of this recent trouble-maker, and bases his suit on the contention that Hoover has been a citizen of the United States only since 1919. Ebding has written many interesting works attempting to prove that the world is not a globe, and has filed this suit through his patriotism and conscience, specifically asking that Vice-President Dawes be restrained from certifying to the Senate the electoral vote cast for Hoover. The opinion still prevails to a great extent among the public as to whether Hoover's constitutional right under his citizenship to become President of the United States has ever been definitely settled by the courts. The election of Hoover will doubtless be ratified and he will become President without a hitch, but this suit properly filed in Federal Court, will take its due process and consideration and an opinion rendered according to facts in the case. It may develop that there is a greater wisdom in a master mind behind this suit than is attributed to the "crank" Ebding who has started the trouble.

Joe Myers, district deputy game warden, was a visitor in Cross Plains this week. Among other things in connection with the game laws he related that the law requires that all trappers of fur animals obtain a trappers' license, and that he would return and check up on all trappers of fur animals in this section.

The head of the local fire department requests that the people be warned of the danger in burning off dead grass lawns, or the careless burning of student and business section of the city. You not only violate a city law, but endanger your own and all other property near you. Help the fire department protect your property.

Jess Carter, of the State Fire Insurance Department, visited with his mother-in-law, Grandma Kennedy, and other relatives in Cross Plains last Sunday. With other officials of the Fire Insurance Department he had been attending the district meetings. He returned to Austin Monday. Jess is a son of Rev. C. D. Carter, well known throughout this part of Texas.

In this fast age of motor traffic there are more "death valleys" than the one in Inyo county, California.

CHRISTMAS ISSUE OF REVIEW NEXT WEEK

Next week's issue of the Review, Dec. 21, will be a big twelve-page Christmas edition. Its cover page will be a striking lithographic scene of a Christmas eve night, vividly picturing old Santa as he pauses before entering a modest, but typical rural home. Several hundred extra copies of this big edition will be printed, and there will be no issue of the paper the following week, as the Review force will follow the custom of nearly all business concerns, especially newspapers, and take off for a holiday rest. Begin figuring on your ads for this Christmas issue, and help us complete the work on time.

BAPTIST CHURCH

Sunday morning the pastor, Rev. Hill, preached a very effective sermon, the theme being the Biblical method of raising the church finances.

It had been arranged in conference to start raising the 1929 budget on that day to take care of all expenses of the church, and at this service there were 95 members pledged over half of the necessary amount. It is now in the hands of a committee to raise the balance from the membership. This method of payment of church finances eliminates the necessity of calling on the membership for money at indefinite times, and all pledges are based on weekly payments, which has proven the easiest way to raise the finance.

Last Friday afternoon fire, which was first discovered in the flue over an oil stove, caused small damage in the Ira Upton home, in the southeast part of town. The siren fire alarm was sounded and the fire department respond immediately, but the small blaze was extinguished before the engine reached the scene. It is believed the fire originated in some manner from the oil stove, and only a minor damage to the floor of the second story and that part of the building near the stove is reported.
